Switched: a crossover between Brave and How To Train Your Dragon

"Push meh queen!" a maid yelled

"Ah cannae!" Elinor cried. It hurt so much and she was just so tired and the ship was rocking violently

" Aye ye can." Right as the words left the maids mouth she noticed the baby's head was showing. Elinor pushed with all her might, but. it still wasn't enough. She wanted to cry, she wanted her husband but he was on an island called Fetlar. It was where she was heading now but the baby was coming early.

"One mair big push!" The queen did as she was told. She took a deep breath and pushed. The pain she felt as the child was born made her scream. She watched as the maid ran out of the room with a bundle in her arms, she didn't even know the sex of her baby.

In another part of the ship another baby was being born;

Valhallarama pushed as hard as she could. She felt a stabbing pain and stopped pushing immediately. By the look of the lady that sat in front of her open legs she know something was wrong. The maid looked horrified at the sight of blood that flowed form Valhallarama's body if they didn't get the baby out now it would drown.

"We need ta get da baby out now!" the lady cried. The way she said it made Valhallarama push hard and then the most glorious sound filled the air. She herd the cry of her child before everything black.

The lady held the baby in her arms and rushed out of the room without even checking the sex of the child. She rushed past Stoick the vast, who was waiting outside the room. She ran into a room at the same time another woman ran in. The two woman collided and the babies were thrown into the air. Elinor's maid caught one of the baby and Valhallarama's the other but they did not know that they had switched the babies. They rush to the table to cut the umbilical cord and wash the babies up. The maid noticed the Queen had had a lovely baby boy.
